Pre-K 4 SA CEO Dr. Sarah Baray

In 2011, former San Antonio Mayor Julián Castro convened a taskforce of chief executive officers, superintendents and education professionals to identify the most effective method to improve the quality of education in the city. Following a year of investigation and deliberation, the taskforce recommended a program focused on high-quality prekindergarten (Pre-K) services for four-year-old children.

Today, Dr. Sarah Baray is chief executive officer of that program, dubbed Pre-K 4 SA. Pre-K 4 SA is a full-day Pre-K program dedicated to improving equity in education and building a world-class workforce through high-quality early learning.

Educational equity is a longtime interest for Baray. Prior to her current position, she was a professor at Texas State University, where she directed the Ph.D. in School Improvement program and served as a researcher and instructor in the Educational and Community Leadership program focused on educational equity.

Converge recently spoke with Baray about the importance of educational equity, the role technology can play in promoting equity and why high-quality early education is critical to future success.
