1. Application Details

Applicant: Office of Historic Preservation

Type: Finding of Historic Significance

Date Received: 22 July 2019

2. Findings

214 Lotus St is a single-story Queen Anne residence with rear accessory structure built in 1909 for (and likely by) Adolph J Wernette. Hector Ubaldo currently owns the property. It is located in the Lavaca neighborhood, but outside the boundaries of the Lavaca historic district and outside the boundaries of the S Presa/S St. Mary's neighborhood conservation district (NCD-1).

Lotus St was established c. 1909, making the subject structure one of the first homes. The structure is located in the S Presa St/S St. Mary's neighborhood conservation district (NCD-1), south of the Lavaca historic district and southeast of the King William historic district. The neighborhood is identified by staff as an eligible local historic district. The two historic districts and the NCD cumulatively contain dozens of individual local historic landmarks.

Lavaca's residential sector is one of the oldest in the San Antonio area that has survived into modern times, and many of the homes in this area are landmark structures of unique character. The district was initially partitioned into residential lots by the city in 1852 and by developers Samuel MStrick and Thomas Devine in 1854. However, no substantial development occurred there until after the beginning of a period of intense building in the King William District in the early 1870s.¹

The Lavaca neighborhood was designed primarily for working class families. Archival records indicate that the neighborhood mix during the initial development period included carpenters, stonemasons, shopkeepers, clerks, tailors, bartenders, teamsters, and butchers. Residents were mostly of Germanic heritage, but also included those of Polish, Hispanic, and African American descent. Thus, the neighborhood contains adobe and stone saltbox homes from the Spanish era and the 1850s, several styles of vernacular homes from the turn-of-the-century era, and modern bungalows as well.²

Wernette was a contractor/builder and likely built his residence. Wernette was a second-generation Alsatian American, grandson of J. B. Wernette, whose family came to central Texas under Henry Castro and settled in D'Hanis, Texas, where Adolph was born. D'Hanis was the third of Castro's settlements, established in 1847 by 27 Alsatian families and named for a manager of Castro's colonization company.³

Sanborn maps show a rear structure in roughly the same location as the current outbuilding—this was rented over the years by various owners, but the Wernettes used it as a barn.⁴ A site visit on 24 July 2019 showed staff that the house originally had a wood porch, level with the threshold of the front door. A previous owner removed this porch and replaced it with a poured concrete slab and bricks.

3. Architectural Description

214 Lotus is a single-story Queen Anne residence with rear accessory structure built in 1909. It is located in the Lavaca neighborhood, but outside the boundaries of the Lavaca historic district and outside the boundaries of the S Presa/S St. Mary's neighborhood conservation district (NCD-1). The block on which the property sits is bounded to the north by Lotus St, the west by S Presa St, the south by Panama St, and the east by Interstate 281. The property is on the south side of Lotus St.

The house is comprised of the historic core and a number of additions. The historic core has clapboard siding and a hipped composition shingle roof with front-facing shingled gable over a bay window in a recessed porch. Round columns with newer brick bases and wood balustrades line the edge of the concrete porch. What appears to be an historic pendant lamp is found centered on the porch ceiling. The primary (north) elevation of the historic core retains its original one-over-one wood windows and wood screen frames. The front door has a decorative surround with fixed transom; the door has an oval lite, as does the single sidelight. A brick skirt has been added to this elevation to compensate for removal of a wood porch, which would have met the house at the top of the brick. One historic wood window and modified wood screen remain on the west elevation of the historic core before an addition meets the core.

When consulting a satellite view of the property, there appear to be at least four phases of additions to the historic core. Two are marked by hipped roofs; the others have flat roofs. East and rear additions are marked by the presence of either metal-sash or reused wood windows. On the east end of the primary elevation is an addition discernable due to board-and-batten siding and a pair of ganged metal-sash windows. Rear additions have clapboard siding and either metal-sash or reused wood windows. The rear entrance is a modern nine-light paneled door with boarded up sidelight. On the west side of the core on the board-and-batten clad addition, there is evidence of an infilled porch, marked by white square pilasters. The west elevation also has two doors, perhaps indicating that the structure was subdivided into apartments at some point.

The rear accessory unit is a side-gabled Craftsman-style structure with visible rafter tails and wood-frame windows. Historic cladding on the east end has been replaced with plywood. The south and west sides of the accessory structure are obscured by trees and brush. A wood carport is attached to the north side of the accessory unit.

Character-defining features of 214 Lotus include:

- Clapboard siding on the historic core
- Round columns on the recessed porch
- Decorative surround on front door
- Shingled gable over bay window on historic core
- One-over-one wood windows and screens where found on the historic core

Summary prepared by the Office of Historic Preservation's ScoutSA Program

214 Lotus is a single-story Queen Anne residence built in 1909 for (and likely by) Adolph J Wernette. Hector Ubaldo currently owns the property. It is located in the Lavaca neighborhood, but outside the boundaries of the Lavaca historic district and outside the boundaries of the S Presa/S St. Mary's neighborhood conservation district (NCD-1). Lotus Street was established c. 1909, making the subject structure one of the first homes. Wernette was a contractor/builder and likely built his residence. Sanborns show a rear structure in roughly the same location as the current outbuilding—this was rented over the years by various owners, but the Wernettes used it as a barn. Currently zoned RM-4.

Eligible Criteria under UDC 35-607(b):

- 5: Its embodiment of distinguishing characteristics of an architectural style valuable for the study of a period, type, method of construction, or use of indigenous materials; 214 Lotus is an example of the Queen Anne style.
- 8: Its historical, architectural, or cultural integrity of location, design, materials, and workmanship; the home represents the economic and social heritage of San Antonio because it was built by a German contractor/builder. Additionally, the structure was one of the first on the Lotus street, which was established c. 1909.
- 13: It bears an important and significant relationship to other distinctive structures, sites, or areas, either as an important collection of properties or architectural style or craftsmanship with few intrusions, or by contributing to the overall character of the area according to the plan based on architectural, historic or cultural motif; the structure contributes to a greater understanding of the development of the Lavaca neighborhood. It is located in an area identified by staff as an eligible local historic district.

Jessica,

This is a joke. The owners have been trying to sell it for a year now at about $350,000. I'm not sure if they succeeded or not, but during the last two weeks, they bulldozed all the beautiful trees that surrounded this home. If the home was worthy enough to be on the market last year at such a high price, the structure itself is not in bad condition.

I live a few houses down the way at [REDACTED]. HDRC rep from District 1, lives a few homes from this structure.

I've attached a screen shot from 2018 and 2 recent photos from a couple of years ago when I noticed that they bludgeoned the trees.

Very sad.

The LNA is definitely opposed to demolition. We'll write a letter to that effect and are working on other options to oppose. Are you working with the owner to discuss his needs? He likely wants to do multiple units. That is still possible with that space without tearing down the house.

A comment from one of our board who deals with these houses is that the front is classic architecture of the period and though the porch slab is new, the facade otherwise appears to be fully intact and has all original elements. The rear portion appears to be an addition (which has the slightly damaged roof), so if that portion was to be demolished it is less of a concern.

Dear Jessica:

The San Antonio Conservation Society opposes the demolition requests for 214 Lotus and 230 Sharer. 230 Sharer appears to be providing housing and appears to be in decent repair. 214 Lotus is an excellent example of a Folk Victorian cottage with many original architectural features and details, including original siding, porch, built-ins, and floors. This house contributes to its historic neighborhood and was recently purchased for $230,000, meaning that it could easily improve its value with a sensible rehabilitation.

He asked me a gazillion times if I lived in the neighborhood or knew the area, and said I couldn't possibly appreciate how bad this house is and how difficult it would be to restore it.

I explained that we had discussed it and reviewed it and would not support demolition. We went back and forth for awhile. he would like to have a conversation with you guys (I'd get Oscar's input as well) but he hasn't sent me an email yet.

Hi Jessica,

You likely have more access to details than I do, but I put together a story of the residents of 214 Lotus from its building until the mid 1930s. Sources are ancestry.com, Bexar County Records, and other resources within ancestry.com

I do this for houses in Lavaca from time to time to share with the neighbors. I don't think anyone in the story is of particular significance, but it gives a little life to the house. Feel free to share.

Adolph Wernette was the son of a French father and Austrian mother who married in D'Hanis in 1869. Young Adolph was born in 1870 and raised in Medina County. He came to San Antonio and worked as a carpenter and builder.

In 1894, he married Marie Elfrieda Lamm, born to German immigrants on 22 October 1875. Elfrieda's family had deep connections in the area. Most of her father's eight siblings had also emigrated from Germany and settled in the Hill Country. Elfrieda had 10 siblings, who, along with many cousins, left the family farms for the city of San Antonio.

For a time, the couple lived at 415 Dakota St (Historic Gardens area near the Alamodome) where they raised three children. The youngest, Leo John, was only 5 years old when he died in 1907 in Torreon, Coahuila, Mexico.

In 1909, Adolph completed building the house at 214 Lotus Ave. He and his wife and two older children moved in. But tranquility was not to last. On Nov 5, 1910, his wife, Elfrieda, died of a gunshot wound.

Adolph remarried in 1912 to Lucille Zimmerman. The new couple called 214 Lotus Ave home, which they shared with his two teenaged children until later that year. Around that time, daughter Lottie married Raymond Osborne and moved to Oregon. The Osbornes eventually moved to the Dallas-Fort Worth area, where her brother, Frederick lived after marrying in 1919. The siblings maintained ownership of 415 Dakota for a time, but never moved back to San Antonio.

We're not sure what happened to Lucille, as in 1916, Adolph married his 3rd wife, Anna Elizabeth Albert (formerly Bolsetter), a widow who'd lost her only son in WWI. Adolph and Anna moved to Orange, California for a time, returning to San Antonio before 1930, where he lived until his death in 1940.

Meanwhile, the house at 214 Lotus was rented to the Newton Amick family (picture). The 1920 census indicates 13 family members sharing the house. The census lists the house as "124 Lotus," however, based on the adjacent properties, their occupants in 1910 and 1920, this is believed to be 214 Lotus.

Marcellus H (MH) Davis, a realtor, married Ollie Mills in her hometown of Gonzales, Texas in 1903. They had three children: Marcella, Mary Virginia, and MH Jr. In 1920, they were living, along with grandfather WH Davis, on Saunders St in the Prospect Hill area. In 1924, MH and Ollie bought the house at 214 Lotus St. for $2000 (8% interest). Daughter Marcella Davis was a Junior at Main Ave High School in 1927 (now Fox Tech). The family lived there from 1924 until the couple divorced. In 1929, MH Davis still lived on Lotus St, but was listed as "single" while his now ex-wife and children had moved to Ashby Place.

MH Davis married his new wife, divorcee Marion Boesling Bueller in late 1929. Marion had previously lived in nearby King William on Mission St with then husband George Bueller, their daughter, Juanita and son Ralph. But by 1930, the Buellers had divorced, and George and his daughter Juanita were living in Houston. Marion married MH Davis and lived on Lotus St with her son Ralph. That year, the home was valued at $3500.

Their neighbors on Lotus St included the Wild and Bennett families. Neighbor Susan Bennett had married Herman Wild and raised their children on Lotus St, amongst their extended family.

Attached are the listing pictures of this property. From the pictures the house appeared to be in decent condition when put on the market.

I've also attached the listing itself.

I hope this helps to document the condition of the property when it was on the market for sale.

SAN ANTONIO CONSERVATION SOCIETY

August 21, 2019

STATEMENT:

TO: Historic and Design Review Commission, City of San Antonio

RE: Item B-13: 214 Lotus Street

HDRC Case No.: 2019-422

Statement of the San Antonio Conservation Society regarding the historic house at 214 Lotus Street.

Two months ago, the San Antonio Conservation Society contacted the Office of Historic Preservation regarding the home at 214 Lotus because we knew that the property had architectural significance. We also knew that the building had been marketed within the last year as an historic property in an area with a vibrant tradition of re-use and rehabilitation. The sale price appeared consistent with that of other preservation projects in the community.

The Conservation Society concurs that the home at 214 Lotus meets three of the criteria required in the Unified Development Code for designation as a historic landmark. First, it is an excellent example of a Queen Anne styled Victorian home with its clapboard siding, distinctive roofline, and decorative porch. Additions to the house do not detract from the columned front porch, large entrance, and gabled façade.

Second, the house is associated with Adolphe Wernette family, for whom it was built in 1909. The Wernettes were descended from the original Alsatian settlers of Castroville and continued to be a presence in San Antonio. Thirdly, the building provides a connection to the earliest history of this neighborhood, having helped set the standard for housing when it was constructed.

Respectfully Submitted,

SAN ANTONIO CONSERVATION SOCIETY

Patti Zaiontz, President
