working within the Ready to Work Board. I believe that everyone has the ability to succeed, they just need the tools to get there whether it be skills training, interview wardrobes, or motivation. I have a passion for helping others to succeed and find their potential. I have been fortunate enough to have had wonderful mentors in my life who have helped me to build my confidence and find my place as a leader in my community and I would like to be able to do this for others which is why I have also applied for the Mayors Commission on the Status of Women. I believe that women have a place in all areas of life, business, and leadership, and want to be part of developing those opportunities. As a Hispanic woman I was blessed to have the opportunity to attend a top university, and I took that opportunity and turned it into a Masters degree. After I finished my degree, I wanted to give back so I applied and was accepted to the UIW Cardinal Latina Leaders Mentor program so that I could give a student much like myself support and advice throughout their journey to get their degree. It was such a fulfilling experience that I would like to leverage the experience and knowledge gained by becoming part of this

	commission. There are so many ways to help others in San Antonio, but serving on the Ready to Work Board or the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women would be a way for me to make a greater impact on the community in which I live in. I really do believe that when we help others to succeed we all benefit.
